

About Our Society

Over the years, our library, once housed in the boot of a car, has grown to thousands of books, data CDs, microfiche, maps, magazines and journals, electoral rolls, and telephone directories. We also have a large collection of family histories, written by our members and local residents, which tell about the early European settlers and families of the area.

In addition to worldwide research of family histories our members, individually and collaboratively, research, write, and publish histories of our local area. Titles include:

“They Chose Beenleigh; A Tribute to the Immigrant Landowners and Pioneers of Beenleigh and Eagleby, Queensland, Australia, Prior to 1885”

By the LRDFHS

“They Cared for Beenleigh; The History of the Beenleigh Hospitals and the Doctors and Nurses of the Hospitals”

By Anne McIntyre for the LRDFHS

We have several computer stations with access to online databases for members and visitors to do research.

Our quarterly journal, Dugullumba Times, is free to all members. The name, Dugullumba, is the name that the Indigenous people of the area gave to the Logan River, and means, “Home of the Hornet”.

It’s not all about researching history, as much fun as that is. We love a chance to socialise, especially over morning tea after listening to our monthly guest speaker. Our end of year Christmas Lunch is a high point of the year. Lots of fun!

Our research library is in a dedicated area that is gradually growing as time passes. A comprehensive index, that is continually being updated, allows our members to search for the item they require to continue their research; or just find an interesting book for a really good read.

Not sure? Wouldn’t know where to start? Can’t understand computers?

Relax, our members love helping each other, and we have members who are very experienced after years of researching. They are always happy to give tips to our new members and to each other! Sometimes a new idea can set you on the right path to success!

That’s why being in a family history society can be so helpful in tracing down that elusive ancestor. And anyway, it’s great to sit around and chat to friends with a common interest.

Some of our members are manning a stall at a recent state history conference, ready to help anyone who has enquiries about family or local history, or our society.
